The South Fork Natural History Museum and Nature Center

The South Fork Natural History Museum and Nature Center is designed to increase interest in, knowledge of, and appreciation for the natural world, with special emphasis on the natural history of eastern Long Island's South Fork.

Their goal is to be more than a natural history museum, but rather a multifaceted organization of educators and researchers documenting the natural resources found on the South Fork, offering explorations in the out-of-doors and providing life-changing nature experiences for children and adults. The site is contiguous with the Long Pond Greenbelt Preserve, one of the South Fork's most unique natural areas. The 18,600 square foot museum and nature center has been designed and was built according to stringent ecological guidelines and will serve as a model of environmentally sound planning and construction. The museum's major objective is to procure, preserve, document, study and display material relevant to the natural and anthropological history of eastern Long Island's South Fork. It's a wonderful place to visit and explore the natural world in an educational and tranquil atmosphere.
